Risk profile of the Sub-Fund

The Sub-Fund will mainly be invested in financial instruments selected by the Management Company. These instruments are subject to market trends and fluctuations. The main risks faced by investors subscribing in units of the Fund are the following: risk associated with discretionary management, capital risk, equity risk, interest rate risk, credit risk, currency risk, commodity risk, counterparty risk, volatility risk, liquidity risk, emerging market risk, high yield security risk.

As of January 19, 2021, the exposure of the Diversified Flexible Strategy sub-fund to the equity markets may represent up to 100% of its net assets, whereas previously the FCP's prospectus indicated that: "The exposure of the Sub-fund to the equity markets is limited, to 80% of its net assets. At least 20% of the net assets of the Sub-Fund will be exposed to debt securities and / or money markets". Consequently, we adjusted the synthetic risk indicator of the Diversified Flexible Strategy compartment to level 5 (previously at level 4). Please refer to the Prospectus of the Gems Olympia UCITS Fund for a complete and detailed list of the risk associated to the Fund and its Sub-Funds.

GEMS OLYMPIA UCITS FUND - DIVERSIFIED FLEXIBLE STRATEGY

August 2021

Monthly Commentary

The Diversified Flexible Strategy ("DFS") sub-fund of the Gems Olympia UCITS Fund gained 1,45% (units I-USD) in August 2021.

Most equity markets advanced for the month, though Asian markets struggled under renewed covid outbreaks and continuous pressure from Chinese regulators on local companies. DFS equities advanced across the board, with notable gains from blockchain-related stocks, large cap tech companies, health care equities and financials. Small cap equities were the only laggard, with the renewed virus outbreak taking a heavier hit on smaller businesses than giant corporations. Our commodity strategy posted only moderate gains as the hurricane season prompted a spike in natural gas prices that negatively affected the strategy towards month end. Our fixed income bucket also rose, with high yield erasing intra-month losses to close in positive territory.

Going into September, DFS remains primarily invested in equities and with an increased exposure towards growth stocks.
